

Medical pretraining can significantly improve downstream medical imaging performance when labeled data is limited and related unlabeled images are available.