

Transfer learning offers limited performance gains on medical imaging tasks because medical images differ substantially from natural images. Simple lightweight models can perform comparably to pretrained ImageNet architectures on large scale medical imaging tasks.