

Transfer learning offers limited performance gains on medical imaging tasks because medical images differ substantially from natural images. Medical pretraining can significantly improve downstream medical imaging performance when labeled data is limited and related unlabeled images are available.